Dear Members of Congress:

Reauthorizing the State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP) is one of the most important tasks before Congress this year. SCHIP has significantly expanded children's health insurance coverage and thus improved the health care that low-income children receive. Reauthorization offers us the opportunity to strengthen and build on the success of this important health insurance coverage program.

The Senate and House Budget Resolutions provide the opportunity for $50 billion in new federal funds over the next five years so that health insurance can be provided to many of the 8-9 million uninsured children in the U.S. – especially those who are eligible for, but not currently participating in, public health programs for low-income children. This increased spending on children's health insurance is a very sound investment in our nation's future.

Since the new "pay-as-you-go" rules require that additional expenditures be offset by commensurate savings through other program cost reductions and/or new revenues, we urge you to consider adding revenues through an enhanced tobacco tax as a key offset. We urge you to consider adding at least $.61 to the federal tobacco tax, which would result in a per-pack cigarette tax of $1.00 and a corresponding increase in all other tobacco products' excise taxes.

The public health benefits resulting from higher tobacco costs are well documented. Studies show that every 10 percent increase in the price of cigarettes reduces youth smoking by seven percent and overall cigarette consumption by four percent. Increasing the tobacco tax will also generate hundreds of millions of dollars in health care savings because fewer smokers means fewer people with strokes, heart attacks, cancer, and other smoking-related health conditions.

By discouraging smoking through an increase in the tobacco tax and using the resulting revenues to improve enrollment in children's health insurance programs, we are creating a win-win proposition in support of our children's health. It will also result in long-term savings as children become healthier and more productive members of society.
